"Garlic Breath. Garlic Bud. Garlic Head." Juli Clemans has been called them all. Her father's garlic farm and prosperous store have made the family wealthy, but for Juli, the ridicule has outweighed the rewards. So when she finally meets a man she's interested in, how can she tell him who she is when he's disgusted by garlic? Alan Loudon is drawn to Juli's compassion for others when they meet as volunteers at a soup kitchen. But Alan has a secret, and finding a way to expose it becomes more and more difficult as their relationship grows. Will Alan and Juli learn to trust God - who introduced them in the first place - or will they continue to lean on their own understanding?
